Happy Holidays to your family from MWR Carlisle, Letterkenny, & Fort Indiantown Gap! When we sat down this year to enjoy our office Thanksgiving feast, our conversations took on a life of their own. I sat back and listened as each person talked about their family traditions, what they remembered from childhood and what they loved most about their holidays. We all have our own special ways we create traditions and memories for our families. Spending some time together as a work family around a table filled with the sensational smells of our dinner got me in the holiday spirit.

As this festive time of year begins, we turn our thoughts to how our traditions have evolved as we grew up, moved away and for some of us, traveled around the globe. Thinking of our first Christmas as a family in Fairbanks, Alaska always brings a smile to my face - we were so poor but my husband, Joe, an Air Force Airman invited his entire office over for the holiday meal. I learned a lot that Christmas about cooking, missing our family, and creating our own traditions. I made the traditional feast complete with a turkey, ham and all the trimmings. What a look of surprise when Joe carved the bird in front of everyone to include his Commander and noticed that there was something plastic in the turkey cavity that I didn’t remove before cooking! While I may have grown into a better family chef over the years, I wouldn’t trade those memories or even that experience for anything!

This year, thankfully, I’ll be hosting the holidays with our family in Boiling Springs. When everyone arrives, we’ll cut down and decorate the tree, enjoy family board games late into the night and wake to the smells of my Grandmother’s Pennsylvania Dutch recipes. We’ll drink a toast to the ones we love and deeply miss, and we’ll spend the afternoons napping and enjoying our home filled with family and friends. Lots of people, food, and giggles. I wouldn’t have it any other way.

Enjoy your holidays, Liz

What is Family and Morale, Welfare & Recreation?

On the Cover

The Christmas tree on our cover this month is decorated in a festive patriotic theme. Many of the ornaments capture a memory from the places where this family has lived and visited. At this time of year we give thanks to our Military Families around the world for their service to our nation.

Dear Legal Eagle:

My kids were bad this year so I told them Santa is not coming. Is there a way to make sure he doesn’t? I was going to light a fire in the fireplace so he can’t come down the chimney.

Santa is in the business of bringing toys and cheer to children; therefore, when he visits your house every December he may be considered a business invitee. You also set out cookies and expect him to arrive. Invitees are owed a high duty of care by a homeowner to keep the premises safe. Because you know Santa comes down the chimney, you cannot set a trap to stop him from entering your property, particularly if Santa does not know you do not want him to visit this year. Send a letter up to the North Pole before Christmas Eve revoking your permission for him to enter your home. You could also post a sign on your roof revoking permission. If he ignores your request and still enters your home, he would now be considered a trespasser. You still cannot set a trap for him, but your duty towards him is less. Hopefully he’ll get the message before singeing his Santa suit.

Dear Legal Eagle:

We’re travelling to our vacation home in Florida for two months this winter. We don’t want our leased apartment to stay vacant so we were thinking about renting it out. Can we?

You are talking about subletting your apartment. Subletting occurs when you, the tenant, rent out your property to another tenant; you become a mini-landlord in a sense. First, you’ll want to read your lease. Some leases strictly prohibit subletting and some require landlord approval. If the landlord authorizes your sublease, you’ll need to find a tenant. Many college students or interns usually look for short term leases. Be careful who you sublet to, as you will not be around to monitor the place, and it may be harder to go after them for damages if they disappear after the sublet ends. Typically, permission to sublease a residence does not release you from liability for the actions and damages of your sublessor.

Legal Eagle is brought to you this month by the Carlisle Barracks Legal Assistance Office (717) 245-4940; Alycia Marie Stokes, intern, and CPT Katie Dang, Judge Advocate. The information contained herein is provided for informational purposes only and should not be construed as legal advice.
To give extra convenience to military shoppers this holiday season, the Army & Air Force Exchange Service is extending its return policy for items purchased between Nov. 1 and Dec. 24. The Exchange’s standard policy allows returns anywhere from up to 15 to 90 days of purchase with a sales receipt. The holiday return/exchange policy extends these terms through Jan. 31, 2017.

“Sometimes, a gift can miss the mark,” said Carlisle Barracks Exchange General Manager, Trish Jones. “The Exchange’s extended return policy goes the extra mile, making it even easier for Army Soldiers and families to give—and receive—the perfect gifts this year.”

Shoppers can return items purchased through shopmyexchange.com at the Carlisle Barracks Exchange. For more information about the extended refund policy, shoppers can visit Exchange customer service.

Once again, the Army & Air Force Exchange Service is offering fee-free layaway for US Army’s, families and retirees who want to get a jump-start on their holiday shopping and keep gifts hidden safely out of sight from prying eyes.

The Carlisle Barracks Exchange will waive the $3 service fee for items that are placed on layaway and paid for by Dec. 24 – including toys and bikes. Purchases of $25 or more are eligible for the layaway plan.

“By waiving the service fee, the Carlisle Barracks Exchange is giving military shoppers extra incentive to consider layaway, both as a budgeting tool and as a way to keep snooping loved ones from finding their gifts before the big day,” said Carlisle Barracks Exchange General Manager Trish Jones. “With a few days to go before the holidays, shoppers can start checking off their gift lists – and keep those presents safely hidden.”

A deposit of 15 percent is required to hold items on layaway. Shoppers can visit customer service at the Carlisle Barracks Exchange for complete program details and eligibility information.

What’s the Story with…?

What’s the story with…?” is a phrase commonly heard at Carlisle Barracks. With more than 50 buildings in the National Historic Register, the post has a history unlike many others.

This is the latest in a series that will take a look at historic buildings, photos and more that tell the story of Carlisle Barracks. Throughout its nearly 260 years of history, the post has been the home to many pioneering schools, events and leaders that have helped shape our Nation. Want to learn more? Check out the Carlisle Barracks history page at http://carlislebarracks.carlisle.army.mil/history.htm or visit the U.S. Army Heritage and Education Center at http://www.carlisle.army.mil/ahec/index.cfm

This week’s entry focuses on the Jim Thorpe Fitness Center.

Built sometime before 1887 by Carlisle Indian Industrial School students, the Jim Thorpe Fitness Center is one of the three physical fitness facilities on Carlisle Barracks. The building has retained its original purpose as it was also a gym for the Carlisle Indian Industrial School.

The facility was enlarged in 1887, adding the three-story front, then renovated in 1976 and again in 2003 that included updating interior finishes and altering the structure to meet the changing demands of fitness today.

It was named after the famed athlete, Jim Thorpe (of Sac and Fox Indian heritage), in 1954 since he won both the Decathlon and Pentathlon in the 1912 Olympics in Stockholm, Sweden. He is the only athlete to ever win both of these events, though his medals were later taken away and his records stricken from the book because he had played two years of semi-professional baseball which disqualified him from the games as he was not an amateur athlete as the International Olympic Committee required at the time. Also in 1912, he was awarded the, “All Around Amateur Athletic Union Champion of the U.S.” His achievements and resulting fame brought recognition to the Carlisle Indian Industrial School.

Today, the Jim Thorpe Fitness Center is available for use by active duty, retired military and their authorized family members, DA civilians, reserve and National Guard personnel, DoD contracted employees, technical representatives, and employees of military banking facilities and credit unions who are working at Carlisle Barracks.

What buildings would you like to learn more about? Send an email to usarmy.carlisle.awc.mbx.atwc-cpa@mail.mil with the Subject Line: “What’s the story with?” and we’ll include in an upcoming edition.
