During the month of May we welcome longer days and warmer weather, celebrate our mothers and remember our fallen. We also set aside a special day to honor Military Spouses. Traditionally, Military Spouse Appreciation Day is celebrated the Friday before Mother’s Day. It is a day to honor military spouses, both men and women, and recognize the important role our Military Families play in keeping our Armed Forces strong and our country safe. On Saturday, May 17 we celebrate and recognize our military members for their patriotic service in support of our country in all U.S. Military branches. Finally, on May 26 we celebrate the Federal holiday of Memorial Day in remembrance of our veterans who have given their lives while in Military service.

I hope you will all take a moment this month to remember those who serve our country.

what is family and morale, welfare & recreation?

In 1940 a branch within the Army was established known as the Morale Division which later became known as “Special Services”. Family and MWR is a group of men and women who provide support and leisure activities to our Soldiers (active duty, Reserve, and Guard) their Families, military retirees, and civilian employees. Currently working in Family and MWR are approximately 37,000 employees worldwide and their mission is to deliver quality programs to Soldiers and their Families.

Today we’re talking about fuel system cleaning. The first thing to know is how important it is to have a clean fuel system. You need fuel to go, and the cleaner your fuel system, the more efficiently the fuel will burn. That means more power and better fuel economy.

A clean fuel system saves money at the pump. One of the most important things you can do to keep your fuel system clean is to buy good quality gas. Major brands have detergents that keep gum and varnish from rapidly building up in the fuel system.

Most cars on the road are more than five or six years old. That means they've had time for some dirt and rust to start accumulating in the fuel tank. This junk needs to be filtered out of the fuel before it hits your engine. That’s the fuel filter’s job.

So you should have your fuel filter changed when recommended. Check your owner’s manual or ask your service advisor if your fuel filter is due for replacement.

The fuel then goes up into the throttle body. This is another area where varnish and gum can accumulate. A professional fuel system cleaning will use a combination of special cleaning chemicals and old fashioned swabbing to clean out the throttle body. The fuel injectors are the last stop in the fuel delivery system.

It’s really important to keep those fuel injectors clean. The fuel injectors need to deliver a precise amount of fuel, at exactly the right time, in a particular spray pattern. They just can’t do that if they’re dirty. Dirty fuel injectors really rob power and waste fuel.

There are a couple of other things that will help keep your engine clean as well. Of course, air is mixed with the fuel before it’s burned. Dirty air means dirt gets into your engine, so you need to replace your engine air filter when it’s dirty.

Do all of these things and your engine’s air and fuel will be as clean as possible. You’ll get much better fuel economy and better power.

WWW.1STCHOICEMAG.COM | MARCH 2014
My husband had a four-day drill this past weekend. From Thursday through Sunday, he was spanning different parts of the states of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, planning for Summer Annual Training (AT), getting his soldiers qualified at the range and doing a ton of paperwork.

What was I doing? Keeping my sanity back at home with my two kiddos, all the while running errands, going to a play and a baby shower and to grocery stores; giving baths and wiping tears from salty cheeks after a few bumps and falls.

And then Sunday night came.

My husband rolled in through the front door, duffle bag strung over his right shoulder; and we greeted each other with big smiles and big hugs, falling deep into the couch’s soft cushions because we are both wiped out from the weekend’s events.

What I know is this: being a military spouse is hard. It’s challenging. I waft between feelings of pure joy and pride and the occasional dark day or two with feelings of frustration and impatience.

If I can just keep it real with you for a moment, some days I wish we had a “normal life”, one where I could say “yes!” to that weekend invitation to a gathering or not feel like a single parent for weeks on end.

But then I wake up from my silly Pity Party and realize, “I’ve got this!” My God is too great, this country is too amazing, our military is too mighty and my man is too worthy for me to be wallowing in such shallowness.

When talking with fellow Military spouses, you quickly realize they feel the same way.

With this being the month of the Military Spouse, I wanted to tap into the wisdom and perspective they have on life and marriage. I asked them what would be one piece of advice they would like to give to other military spouses; and their replies were nothing but amazing. I hope you treasure their simple, yet profound words as much as I do.

Emily Kocher, wife of a retired Army National Guard Sgt., shared this:

Be supportive and never take a single thing or moment for granted. To this day (6 years after my husband has left the military), I still cherish our time together more than the “average person” because I remember the deployments and the weeks and months away for training. Each minute with him is a gift. So, support them and cherish them; and in my experience, they’ll return the favor!

Sarah Dooley wanted to encourage one another as wives and women and mothers to be there for each other. She noted that being a military spouse is hard but could be easier with each other’s support and compassion, and I couldn’t agree more.

Angela Crossland, wife of an Army E7, 11 Bravo, shares this:

All I can say is that I thank God for another day with my husband and girls. He has served 16 years today and he loves what he does and would not change a thing. As his wife, I would not stand in his way. When he was deployed, I held it together for my girls. I did not fall apart until he was home safe. I just wanted to make him feel wanted and for him to know that he was still my number one man. Every soldier and their family are in the same boat, no matter what branch of service. The soldier is out there serving our country for our freedom and all we can do is pray that they will come home safe. Just hope for the best and send our love.
Stephanie Allee, wife of a retired Army 1st Lt. shared this little snippet:

“Always remember, you DO NOT wear your spouses’ rank.” That common saying always makes me chuckle.

Holly Lawson, who served in the Air Force alongside her husband, says: “never take the moments you have with them for granted; for when they deploy, you will always wish you spent even more time with them.”

Jacqui Beightol, wife of a Marine Staff Sergeant stationed at Camp Lejeune, had some very honest advice to share.

Pick and choose your battles with your spouse. This goes in all marriages, however as a military spouse, this is especially true. Not only the weight of your family is on his or her shoulders but so is their duty, their brothers and sisters in arms and our country’s freedom. Think before you attack them for simple everyday mistakes.

Take pride in yourself and what your spouse does for his/her career, dress appropriately, speak kindly and remember no matter how hard it is, whether they are deployed or stateside, keep your head up.

I think Jacqui has some wonderful advice there!

Monica Kline Kemp, wife of Capt. (P) Andrew Kemp who is currently in Command of Regimental HHC at the Old Guard, shared this:

I always hear from non-military wives and friends “I don’t know how you do it, moving all of the time.” While there are downsides of not usually getting to decide the where, when and what of your future, there are so many plusses. The Army pays us to move, and packs and moves everything for us. We get to live in some awesome (and some not so awesome) places that we never would have had an opportunity to live.

I have so much more I could add, but my number one statement for the military spouse is this:

You signed up for this when you married your soldier. It is our duty to support them, just as it is their duty to do as their leaders see fit. We may not have really known what we were getting ourselves into, but we made a vow to our husbands and we have to take the bad with the good. So stick it out, and look forward to the unknown!

What a positive way to see things!

We may not have really known what we were getting ourselves into, but we made a vow to our husbands and we have to take the bad with the good. So stick it out, and look forward to the unknown!

What a positive way to see things!

Other spouses kept it simple, with God being the driving force behind their advice.

Theresa Ramirez, mother of five and wife to Army Maj. Andres R Ramirez III said to just “Pray, pray pray! Stay close as a family and be flexible.”

Megan Kirkwood Carlton, proud wife of Navy LT Mathew “Frodo” Carlton, says this:

It is hard to realize that the military is your spouses’ number one obligation. Although family is his priority, their military comes first. Early on in our military career this was really frustrating. Now, I realize that it isn’t the Navy that is calling my husband on an 8-month deployment. It’s God. I can’t argue with God’s plan, I trust that HE will put my husband where He needs him on a daily basis. Whether that is here, in an airplane, or on a ship. So when the deployments, lack of communication, or just the agonizing stress of a PCS (Permanent Change of Station) year creep up on me, I realize God’s got this. It’s amazing the pressure it takes off of your family when your heart is one of acceptance instead of anger and frustration.

And the final two pieces of advice I share with you are from two brave and beautiful military widows.

Their poignant but simple advice for each of us and the wisdom that comes from their humbled perspective is one any spouse can draw from.

Susan Orellana-Clark, proud Gold Star wife of Army Capt Bruce Kevin Clark, wanted you to know this:

Count each day as a blessing, give hugs and kisses to your spouse like they might be your last; and just enjoy the little things like sitting on the sofa and watching TV, enjoying those long road trips that PCS season can bring and think of it as a precious time with your spouse. Bottom line is to laugh and love even more.

Finally, Lucine Juskalian, proud wife of retired Army Col. George Juskalian, a WWII, Korean War and Vietnam War Veteran and dear friend to me, shared this: “Respect your husband and realize that every day, every moment is a gift of grace from God”.

I couldn’t have said it any better myself, ladies.

May God continue to bless this great nation, our mighty military; and may He continue to bless our amazing military spouses.

Remember, “You’ve Got This!”

The story of Molly Pitcher is complex. It is a story that is part fact, part myth, and partly combining the stories of multiple women during the Revolutionary War. Myths were built up and repeated without documented evidence to support the story. The name “Molly Pitcher” is derived from the women carrying water to the soldiers. Molly was a common nickname for the names Mary and Margaret. Carlisle’s “Molly Pitcher,” Mary Hays McCauley, was born c. 1750. Mary, like other women, followed her husband during the war. These women were said to “follow the drum.” Today these women are referred to as “Camp Followers.” They worked hard and were very important to the troops they supported. In addition to walking the same great distances as the soldiers, these women cooked, laundered clothing, sewed, cared for the sick, and did many other important jobs. Mary’s husband, William Hays, had enlisted in Thomas Proctor’s Artillery in May of 1777 as a gunner. This battery was engaged at the Battle of Monmouth, New Jersey on June 28, 1778.

The story states that Molly Pitcher’s husband was wounded and she took his place at the cannon. There is no documented evidence that Mary Hays ever manned a cannon. On February 22, 1822, the legislature of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania did award her a pension – “An Act For the relief of Molly M’kolly, for her services during the Revolutionary War.” It was never stated exactly for what services the pension was given. Her pension was for $40 a year. In a 1903 deposition given by Mary McCauley’s great great granddaughter, Mary E. Wilson, she stated, “My grandmother often told me about her grandmother Molly Mckolly alias ‘Molly Pitcher’ telling her about being in the army and about carrying water to the wounded and dying.” From Mary Wilson, the Cumberland County Historical Society was able to obtain a pitcher once owned by Molly Pitcher. This pitcher was not the one used by her in battle but is on exhibit in the Historical Society’s Museum.

After the war, William, Mary, and their son, John, settled in Carlisle on South Street. William worked as a barber. In 1786, Mary became a widow. She had to sell some of their assets to cover William’s debts. Sometime before 1793, Mary remarried a John McCalla (various spellings). If John McCalla deserted the family or died is unknown, he was no longer living with Mary by 1810. She supported herself in a variety of ways including caring for the sick and performing labor including cleaning the Cumberland County Court House and other public buildings. Mary McCauley died on January 22, 1832. At the time of her death, she was living with her son on the corner of South and Bedford Streets. Two Carlisle newspapers ran an obituary for her. The American Volunteer said on January 26, 1832, “She lived during the days of the American Revolution, shared its hardships, and witnessed many a scene of ‘Blood and carnage.’ To the sick and wounded she was an efficient aid, for which; and being the widow of an American hero, she received during the latter years of her life an annuity from the government.” Neither obituary made any mention of firing a cannon.

Today, Molly Pitcher’s burial site is one of the most visible in Carlisle’s Old Graveyard. That was not always the case. A proper tombstone was provided for her on July 4, 1876. The cannon and flagstaff were added in 1905. The large Molly Pitcher statue was not added to the plot until 1916. While all of the facts surrounding the life of Mary Hays McCauley may never be known, it is known that she was an American Patriot.
follow the paper trail

New exhibit, “Follow the Paper Trail”, is free and open now until October 25, 2014. Follow the paper trail through the centuries across Cumberland County. Our exhibit showcases a variety of treasures that tell the stories of people’s lives. Come discover the power of paper and see what an archives has to offer. From the story of the early Native Americans to the creation of the turnpike, changes in the landscape and industries of Cumberland County, visitors will also get a glimpse of life in Cumberland County. The military gallery represents county experience in American military history, from Molly Pitcher to Black Hawk Down. Particularly noteworthy is the Carlisle Indian Industrial School gallery.

CCHS has 2 bus trips scheduled. Friday, May 23, 2014, we will be going to the National Watch & Clock Museum, Wright’s Ferry Mansion, & Susquehanna Glass Factory, with lunch at the Trio Bar & Grill. Thursday, July 17, 2014, we will take a bus trip to Amish Country where we will have a tour of an Amish Farm & house. We will enjoy lunch at the Good N’ Plenty Restaurant, after lunch we will have a step-on guide join us for a narrated tour of the beautiful Amish Countryside.

CCHS offers Civil War walking tours, Carlisle’s 19th Century Firehouse walking tours, the Ashland Cemetery walking tour and the Carlisle Indian Industrial School walking tour.

By: KRISTEN ROWE

Cumberland Valley’s mountains, state parks and forests, game lands and scenic trails are beckoning you to plan your very own excursion this month. You can experience the one and only Appalachian Trail with easy day hikes and convenient parking, glide down tranquil water trails on boats or kayaks, search for breathtaking views or migrating hawks atop a rock outcrop, or spend the night at award-winning campgrounds.

When looking for weekend plans the trip ideas on www.VisitCumberlandValley.com are a perfect way to get started. These themed outdoor itineraries offer a collection of hiking, biking, kayaking and more.

Adrenaline Pumping Adventure - Finding an exhilarating outdoor adventure in Cumberland Valley will be the easy part of your excursion. The hard part is taking that leap of faith to be a little more adventurous. The Valley offers rock climbing, kayaking, skydiving, backpacking, ziplining and more!

Experience the Appalachian Trail - Take a journey to discover the world-renowned, 2,186 mile-long Appalachian Trail. Cumberland Valley is home to the midway point of the trail and features easy day hikes and convenient parking. Once referenced as a “thru-hiker’s dream” the Valley’s portion of the trail offers hiking opportunities for all.

Places to Find Zen - Cumberland Valley features quiet and tranquil outdoor settings for reflection and relaxation. While there are countless places to find a little nirvana in the Valley, suggestions include bird-watching, a bubbling lake and beautiful gardens.

Bird Watching Hotspots - The Valley is home to a collection of state parks, hiking trails and scenic vistas that offer the perfect opportunity to spot wildlife, including a variety of birds. Bring your binoculars and get ready for some fantastic birding.

Get Out on the Water - Take advantage of Cumberland Valley’s world-renowned fly-fishing streams, float down one of the many waterways, or just take a dip in the cool waters. Boating is the perfect way to experience the Valley’s scenic outdoors.

Day Hike Sampler - From easy to extreme, there are miles of trail in Cumberland Valley that can satisfy any hiker. Choose from over 200 miles of trails that range in length and difficulty. We’ve even thrown in a few dining options for when you need a break.

Another fun way to get out and about this May is by attending a local event. See a sampling below.

The "STRATEGIC THINKERS" BREW

Proudly & Responsibly Brewed

Drink responsibly.
Military Spouses play a vital role in the readiness of our Army. As their loved ones in the military take on higher commands, spouses often take on inherent and implied roles as program advisors, mentors and advocates for Army Families. The Senior Spouse Leadership Seminar is conducted at the Army War College in Carlisle as well as the Sergeants Major Academy at Fort Bliss, Texas. It is offered to spouses of Soldiers attending those schools and also includes Soldiers of equivalent status from the Army National Guard and the Army Reserve and at the Army War College the class also includes spouses from other service branches and International military spouses.

The seminar offers an opportunity for participants to explore and refresh skills that can help make their roles more successful. The three-day seminar concentrates on topics such as Working with Volunteer Organizations; Coaching, Mentoring, and Advising; Taking Care of Yourself; Fostering Resiliency; and Protocol for Senior Spouses.

The life of a military spouse can be challenging. Along with the challenges come new and unique experiences and increased resiliency. You can take a look into the life of a military spouse in their own words below. Please join us in celebrating all military Spouses.

Joy Lynn Dismer

Being an Army spouse for 22 years has been a adventure. A wonderful part of being a member of the biggest family in the world is being able to visit and live in some amazing places all over the world. I also enjoy being able to meet the most wonderful people that I will cherish as friends forever.

One of the most difficult challenges I have faced is being away from the person you love for a long period of time. Another challenge I have faced is being both father and mother to our 10 year old twins.

Even with all the ups and downs I would not change my life. I love being an Army spouse.

Kimberley Brooks

I look at being an Army wife as an adventure. I have mastered skills that I never thought I would need. I can fix a computer, unclog a toilet and move half way around the world with a few weeks notice. I have become a pro at staying in touch with people I love via Skype and Facebook. Some people look at our lives and question how we can be happy. Yes, I hate the deployments - but when my husband gets home, we get to date and fall in love all over again. Being away from family is tough - but I have lived and traveled all over the world. It’s all about perspective!
Cindy Ruedi

I met my soldier ten years ago while he was attending CGSC at Fort Leavenworth, KS. After he was finished with school and was already stationed at Fort Hood, TX. We decided to get married after eleven months. I soon moved to Killeen, TX and in a short amount of time I became an Army Wife, mother of six and moved to a new city where I knew no one. Not knowing anything about being an Army wife, I had to learn quick since my husband deployed five months after we got married. I learned how to communicate in late-night 15 minute phone calls, to always send enough brownies and cookies for your soldier to share in care packages, to never put a deposit down on a vacation and that Murphy’s Law isn’t a military spouse’s friend because if it can break… it will!! I also learned that no one out there will understand what you are going through like another military spouse! They are your “sisters and brothers” and will be with you for life if you just open yourself to the others around you!

When I married my soldier I didn’t realize that I was getting a family quite so large! Army is a way of life and one I’m so very proud to be a part of!

To me being a military spouse is about being a family and I wouldn’t have it any other way!

Deborah Lee Moretti

I love being a military wife; I feel it is an honor. Yes, there are several challenges thrown my way, from moving every other year to being a single parent while my Soldier is deployed. But there are so many rewards that come with all of the challenges, making new friends, visiting and living places I would probably never have had the chance to, having an extended family where ever we go with doors always open to us.

Melissa Unrath

I’m married to Craig Unrath, a colonel in the US Army. We have two children. Megan age 15, 9th grade and Tyler age 12, 6th grade. When we move this summer to Ft. Leavenworth, KS it will be our 13th move in 24 years in the military. Also in June, we’ll celebrate our 24th wedding anniversary. He’s my high school sweetheart.

We’ve lived in Germany and all over the United States. It’s been a wonderful experience with the opportunity to live and visit many places that we otherwise would have never seen or lived. We’ve met so many wonderful people from all over the world that are now lifelong friends. The biggest challenges would definitely be moving our children and entire household every couple of years, saying goodbye to friends, finding new schools, doctors, dentists, and hairdressers. But ironically, after all of these years, we now realize that the cause of these challenges is also the reason for the biggest rewards. With each move comes new adventures, an opportunity to live in a new place, and most importantly, the excitement of adding more lifelong friends.

Every Sunday during the Season
FORT INDIANTOWN GAP, PA. - The Pennsylvania National Guard Child and Youth Program is preparing to hold its fourth warrior teen weekend at Fort Indiantown Gap June 19-22. The weekend, open to Pennsylvania National Guard teens and other military geographically dispersed teens, features a river trip down the Youghiogheny River and a tour of training facilities on the installation and it is at no cost to participants.

During the event, teens can interact and build strong peer support networks. They’ll be learning resiliency skills and how to cope with deployments. The event offers an opportunity for these teens to network. Often geographically dispersed military teens don’t realize that others in their community have a parent serving in the reserve component.

Geographically dispersed military families are often found in the guard or reserves. These families do not have easy access to active duty family programs offered on installations for example Child and Youth School Services and Outdoor Recreation Program. These families are frequently located 100s of miles from active duty installations. Their associated service members perform their duty at a local armory, or reserve center.

The Pennsylvania Child and Youth program addresses this shortfall by creating programming to reach geographically dispersed military families. The Pennsylvania National Guard Child and Youth Program often partners with Operation Military Kids, and together they offer programs and events across the Commonwealth throughout the year.

“Our motto is ‘Families First’. We are 100 percent focused on our military service members and their families. We are looking forward to hosting teens from all across the state. It’s going to be a lot of fun,” said Maj. Luke Philips, chaplain and family program director for the Pennsylvania National Guard.

Letterkenny’s Great Outdoors School Age Care Summer Camp offers extraordinary adventure! This year’s camp offers a fully structured program with many educational and recreational activities to keep your child safe and engaged during the summer break. Our site provides over 30 acres of land where campers can safely explore nature and learn about the environment. Each day campers experience hands on art projects, science experiments, trivia challenges, and fitness lessons. Throughout the week additional activities are also available such as golfing, bike riding, water play, nutrition, nature club, visiting the pool, hiking around Rocky Spring Lake and meeting with special guest speakers. New this year is a Golf Clinic at Rocky Springs Golf course with local professional instructors. Campers and counselors will be traveling to various local attractions for our field trip day, no additional cost included. Breakfast, lunch, and snack will be provided to all campers Monday-Friday. All meals follow USDA guidelines. The Great Outdoors School Age Summer Camp is a great opportunity to build new friendships and experience exciting activities while learning. Camp enrollment is available to those who have completed K-6th grade. Registration is by appointment.
